BARTON CENTER FOR DIABETES EDUCATION, INC.

Funds will be used to support the Campership Program.

WEBSTER, MA – August 20, 2009 – The Webster Five Foundation, a charitable organization founded by Webster Five Cents Savings Bank, announced today that it has donated $2,500 to the Barton Center for Diabetes Education, Inc., located in North Oxford. These funds will support the expansion of the Campership Program, which enables economically disadvantaged children who are insulin dependent to participate in year-round resident and day camp educational, recreational, and support programs focused on diabetes management.

Through participation in the Barton Center programs, children not only learn about diabetes strategies and maintenance, but also build a strong network of friends and mentors who share similar experiences. In addition to the health education and support system, the Campership Program allows children to experience a wide array of activities—from arts and crafts, music, and drama to swimming, boating, sports, and more.

“We are very appreciative of Webster Five’s support of this program,” said Lynn A. Butler, Community Relations Director, Barton Center for Diabetes Education. “Diabetes is a major health threat, and being able to keep this program in place until there is a cure means a lot to us and the children.”

“The Webster Five Foundation is proud to support the Barton Center for Diabetes Education,” said Richard T. Leahy. “Providing proper health management techniques, diabetes education, and a support system is essential to all children affected by diabetes.”
